CHRIST CHURCH CHARLESTOWN (CHARLESTOWN)

About the Family

J.D. and Natalie married in 2004. J.D. is originally from Georgia, and Natalie is from Kentucky. They served in youth ministry until, in 2008, they moved to downtown Greenville, S.C., to plant a church, Origins Greenville. During their time in Greenville, they celebrated the births of their two sons, Noah (2009) and Owen (2012).

After eight years in Greenville and seeing Origins come to a place of health, the Mangrums felt God leading them to another adventure of faith. Sensing a pull to New England, they came as a family in 2016 to visit the area and believed God was leading them to Charlestown, Mass., to plant their lives and the church.

J.D. is a graduate of the University of Georgia and New Orleans Baptist Theological Seminary. Natalie loves working on Pinterest projects and making coffee. For fun, they like to drink coffee, spend time with friends, play sports and games with Noah and Owen and live as tourists in Boston.

About the Church Plant

Christ Church Charlestown is a new church family in Boston's oldest and most dense neighborhood. Charlestown has a rich history and is now comprised of three diverse groups with a great divide between them. We want to be a church in, of and for Charlestown, committed to bringing individuals in the town together around the good news of Jesus.

The church has been in the minds and hearts of people in Charlestown even before the Mangrum family arrived in Boston. We will spend 2017 serving the community, sharing the gospel, building relationships and casting vision. The prayer is for Christ Church Charlestown to begin corporate worship services in early 2018.
